Headline:
The unsettled and damp weather continues.

Today:
Thickening cloud and strengthening winds will spread east this morning, with outbreaks of rain gradually following. Cloud lowering and rain will become showery in the afternoon, with the odd heavy burst possible. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
Rather cloudy with showers continuing this evening. Perhaps briefly drier for a time before spells of heavy rain move east toward the end of the night. Remaining breezy. Minimum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Friday:
Early heavy rain should clear by midday but with a few showers following. Becoming largely dry and bright through the afternoon and evening. Feeling mild in sunny spells. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
An unsettled spell with heavy rain and gales possible Saturday. Turning drier from Sunday, with a chance of the odd shower. Winds remaining strong Sunday but easing Monday.
